Kevin advises clients in all aspects of government contracts law. He helps contractors prepare, negotiate, and prosecute claims, requests for equitable adjustment, and termination for convenience settlements, as well as litigating appeals before the Court of Federal Claims and the boards of contract appeals. Kevin also counsels firms with an array of Federal Acquisition Regulation compliance issues, including advising companies new to federal contracting on making a smooth transition. He guides clients through the Freedom of Information Act process from drafting and negotiating FOIA requests to litigating in federal court. Kevin litigates bid protests before the Government Accountability Office, the Court of Federal Claims, as well as at the agency level. In addition, Kevin co-authors the leading treatise on attorney-client privilege, which is regularly cited by federal appeals courts.

Kevin is a cum laude graduate of American University, Washington College of Law, where he was an Articles Editor on the American University Law Review.

Kevin maintains an active pro bono practice focused on assisting veterans in obtaining benefits.
